PROFESSIONAL SUMMARY

AI-focused product leader with 12+ years across subscription growth, commerce, payments, digital transformation, and customer experience. I lead product strategy from problem discovery through delivery, aligning customer insight, commercial outcomes, experimentation, platform scalability, and AI-enabled operating models. At The Economist, I lead four squads and 40+ cross-functional colleagues across ecommerce, paywalls, pricing, checkout, payments, billing, and subscription management, reporting to the CPO.

My strongest contribution is turning ambiguous product and AI opportunities into measurable business outcomes. Recent work includes a £4M FY27 innovation agenda, £1M+ incremental revenue from conversion improvements, 15% CLTV uplift, 10% growth in subscription starts, and AI agent/LLM-assisted workflows that reduced customer service AHT by 30% and enabled £500K+ annual savings. I recently completed an Executive MBA with Distinction at Imperial College London, focused on AI, Machine Learning, Venture Capital, Strategy, and FinTech.
